Brief Synopsis of My PhD Research:

This study has as its objective, an empirical exploration of the effects of monetary policy on macro economic performance in Nigeria and uses quarterly data between 1970 Q1 to 2011Q4, a sample period of forty one years, In addition the study introduced structural breaks to the data, the structural break was applied to only two sub-periods from 1970Q1–1986Q4 before the Structural adjustment programme in Nigeria and from 1987Q1-2011Q4 periods of Structural adjustment programme in Nigeria. To accomplish this, three approaches were utilised. First estimation and analysis was based on coefficient, using long run co-integration and Vector Error Correction Model (VECM). The results were satisfactory and conform to my a priori expectation except. Second, a macroeconomic model was simulated to demonstrate the effects of monetary policy on macroeconomic performance. Thus the results obtained from the simulation are impressive and generally satisfactory; the results suggest the effectiveness of monetary policy implementation for counter cyclical income stabilization. Finally, estimation and analysis of results were based on the residual. Three structural vector autoregressive (SVAR) econometric models were formulated to trace the effects of monetary policy shocks on domestic output, consumers price index and balance of payments position in Nigeria. Structural effects of monetary shocks or innovations were captured by the impulse response functions and the forecast error variance decomposition. The empirical impulse-response assessment indicates that an exogenous shock to the short-term interest rate has the most significant positive effect on domestic output and consumer prices followed by a transitory effect of the broad money. The policy implication is straightforward, monetary policy in Nigeria is effective in maintaining internal balance and ineffective in achieving external balance. Overall, the results suggest that monetary policy affects macroeconomic performance in Nigeria.

- Statistics
- Mortgage Finance
- Treasury Management

TEACHING EXPERIENCE IN UNITED KINGDOM.

Part – Time Lecturer Business School at the University of Greenwich, London (2011- 2013)

I thought Banking courses, Economic Courses and supervised masters theses, the courses thought are:

- Personal & Professional Development (PPD): The PPD course is an undergraduate course aim to develop students’ capacity as individuals to reflect upon their learning and achievement and to plan for their personal education and career development.
- Foundation of scholarship & Research: Is a masters course aim to provide students with a basic set of skill that will support then through the process of studying for a master’s degree and will also be important for professional life after university
- Advance Professional Practice : Is a masters course, builds on the foundational skills of scholarship and research students learned Foundation of scholarship & Research, enhancing manner the ability to undertake and sustain an independent project in a professional manner
- International Trade & Institution: Economics course thought at Master level
- Supervision of Master theses
Position held: Personal & Professional Development 1, Personal Tutor. Duty first point of contact to the students. Always prepared to solve their problem, the university operate the principle of “No referral” I must not refer the PPD 1 students, I should take the problem I cannot solve to the next higher authority (my course leader).

Skills

- Planning lesson notes as a guide to each teaching for the day.
- Classroom management .Feedback to students
- MS Office Word, Power Point and Excel

Estimation of Equations and Analysis at post graduate level.

Co-integration

Short-run dynamics (ECM)

Long-run Estimation

System Equations

Simulation

Descriptive Statistics

Applications of software

- Use of SPSS soft ware
- E-View soft ware
- Micro fit soft ware
- Stata
